Property for sale in Turkey 'has potential'

02/07/2008 11:06

Foreign investors have been advised to consider the merits of buying property for sale in Turkey.

According to Property Showrooms, the European country has considerable investment potential.

Spokesperson Mark Wilson said this is because it meets a number of important requirements, such as being well situated and easy to reach.

In addition, he stated that Turkey also has a good infrastructure which has enabled places like Istanbul to become very popular holiday destinations.

Mr Wilson commented: "It's still one of the more popular destinations.

"As an emerging market, when you look at the entry levels and value for money, it's still a fantastic opportunity."

He added that Turkey is still a fresh market which is seeing lots of development along its Mediterranean coastline in particular.

The country was recently recommended to foreign buyers by Shelter Offshore, which said it has a good climate, amenities and affordable house prices.
